

As a loyal listener and subscriber of XM Satellite Radio I am outraged that the FCC would even consider taking away a valuable service such as the XM Instant Traffic & Weather. This service is up-to-date and to the instant. When I am traveling around the Beltway, or down 66 and I need to get to a business meeting I can't wait for the quick traffic "on the 5's" "10's" or whenever. I need it instantly. It is also helpful in planning business trips to the other cities currently serviced by the stations.

To think that they are stealing any time or revenue from the local stations is ridiculous. Most of the times I will flip on the XM for the quick and instant update and return back to the radio for the local talk shows, or what-have-you. In the fast paced world we live in today XM is providing a resource to get the information we want when we want it. Maybe the local stations need to reconsider their programming!
